Mills Along The Carson River (Images Of America)

Synopsis

Nestled along the picturesque Carson River in the state of Nevada were the quartz mills that crushed and extracted the values from the Comstock ore. These mills were built starting in 1859, when gold and silver were discovered on the Comstock, with the last mill being demolished around the 1920s. Mills were huge plants, in many cases crushing tons of ore a day, sometimes seven days a week. To support these mills, the towns of Empire and Dayton were established to house workers and provide needed supplies. Remnants of these mills have all but disappeared, and in a few more years, there will be nothing to remind people of the wealth these establishments created for individuals, the state of Nevada, and the United States.

Customer Reviews

This book has such a wealth of photos in it, many of which I've never seen before -- which means Mr. Webster really did his research, and didn't just rely on images published on the web. I just received it, have been looking at the pics, and am looking forward to reading the text. If you are a fan of the Virginia & Truckee RR, or are interested in the silver mining of the Comstock Lode, this is a must.

Excellent book for those who want a concise grasp of the many mills and their locations on the Carson River. It has really helped my understanding.
