Customer Reviews

There are wonderful stories in this book. Some will make you laugh until your sides hurt, some will make you cry. All will make you want to keep reading. Well worth the money!

This was a group of interesting stories about women who went all over the world by themselves. I enjoyed the stories and they were all very different.

Really enjoyable short story collection. I laughed so much when I read "Turkish Delight" especially.

This collection of female travel stories is funny, engaging and so wonderfully relatable. It'll make you laugh, cry, say "that's me!!". It'll also make you want to pack your backpack right away and head off somewhere exciting. If you want to travel but you feel nervous, this will show you the options available to you and how doable it is. It will show you what an invaluable life experience it is to go and see the world. Kudos to Gemma for compiling such a great range of tales from a diverse range of women. Thoroughly enjoyable.

This is a great anthology of tales from feisty females from both sides of the Atlantic that will amuse, inform, inspire, and maybe even horrify. The stories are diverse and enjoyable. I particularly liked Hayley Gislason's observation "Travelling helped me with two things: forgetting about the things that don't matter; and being grateful for the things that do."

I loved reading this anthology. It touches on so many different aspects of travelling on your own - from the daunting to the hysterical. A must-read for anyone who loves to hit the road.
